★ Presenter

Kathleen Manley-Coburn is an attorney in Missoula, Montana, where she concentrates much of her legal practice activity on special education issues. She worked as a special education, an elementary, a kindergarten and a preschool teacher for several years in school systems on the Flathead Indian Reservation. She now teaches in Corvallis, Montana, and is an adjunct faculty member at the University of Montana, where she teaches various courses. While a law student, she did an internship with the Disability Law Clinic at the Montana Advocacy Program (MAP), which focuses on legal issues applicable to all persons with disabilities. She earned her BS and MEd degrees, as well as her JD, from the University of Montana.
